

Photo Albert Schmid

Photo Markus Lindner

Collecting

Robert Bretscher grew up surrounded by a construction site at a time when drag line excavators were in daily use. No a surprise then that he has amassed one of the nicest collections of these historical machines ...

Everything big is of special interest to us; this was also the case in 1966 when Dart introduced its Dart 600, the world's largest wheeled loader. Forty years later HiMoBo released a model that Albert Schmid introduces in his series of articles ...

Models

That even small models can be a lot of fun is quite clear with the new Hitachi ZX210-5 combined with the four part de-construction set promises a lot of play value ...

The Kleeman Mobirex MR 110 Z EVO is in demand as a heavy duty load for fans of the heavy duty transport segment. There is much to be seen on the model from Conrad as we take a magnifying glass to the model and report our findings ...

Current interest

The development of construction machines over time is an interesting subject. We shine the spot light on the history of the modern dozer using existing models ...

In the second part of the article about the construction of dioramas, the main focus is on "picture friendly" planning. Markus Lindner shows us what to consider during construction, so that the scenery is put in the limelight ...

New models 6

Eye candy 11

Collector's portrait 12

History of the bulldozer part I 18

Tinplate 32

Classifieds 33

Hitachi ZX210-5 16

Komatsu D155AX-7 26

Faymonville Variomax 28

Kleemann Mobirex MR 110 28

Notteboom MCO-PX 1:87 31

Kitbash wrecking grapple 34

Building a diorama 36

Editorial 3

Contest 25

Reader's picture 33

New medias 39

Partner's page 40

Breaking news 41

Last but not least 42